Justice – Reform

Prime Minister Jean Chrétien declares that the federal government will cover the costs associated with the creation of a national gun registry, one of the key proposals in Justice Minister Allan Rock's controversial package of gun control reforms. Although the bill has passed second reading and is being examined by a Commons committee, Rock offers several amendments easing the conditions of the legislation in order to alleviate the concerns of backbench Liberals, police, and the legal community. Among the changes are limitations on the power of police to inspect the homes of gun owners and reduction in the penalty for first-time gun registry violations.
