

Teaching Reflections: Artichokes

what they say or write matters and the way they say or write it matters too. I want them to be able to position themselves as powerful actors in this world, if they so choose.

The third most important thing that I strive for is that they discover the power of their imaginations and realize that excitement and curiosity are precious bulwarks against the drab, the tedious and the deeply trying